OF AGRICULTURE AND AT-TORNEY GENERAL

2 NAMES MENTIONED RESPEC-TIVELY THOS. D. CAMPBELL
AND IRA K. LETTS

By THOMAS L. STOKES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Feb. 23.—Several posts in President-elect Hoover's cabinet still are very uncertain today, with little more than a week before inauguration.

Refusals from men he had picked have disrupted his plans and caused him to check through the list of eligibles again. Mr. Hoover was at his desk again today, with chief concern over the posts of agriculture and attorney general.

Two names have been brought forward prominently for these posts: Thomas D. Campbell, Montana wheat "industrialist," for secretary of agriculture.

Ira K. Letts, Providence, R. I., federal judge and former assistant attorney general, for attorney general.

Conferences in the next few days will determine whether these men will fill the two posts. Campbell has just returned from a trip to Russia, where he was agricultural adviser to the Soviet government.

Four posts have been definitely filled—secretary of state, Henry L. Stimson, New York; secretary of treasury, Andrew W. Mellon, Pittsburgh; secretary of interior, Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University, and Charles Francis Adams, Boston, secretary of navy.

Besides agriculture and attorney general, this leaves war, commerce, labor and postmaster general.

The president-elect had a conference scheduled today, among others, with Chairman Morin of the house military affairs committee, with whom he is expected to discuss Muscle Shoals, a problem he will deal with early in his administration.

Cranford, N. J., Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—The body of a woman, believed about 30 years old, her head crushed and her clothing soaked with gasoline, was found here today by the driver of a bakery wagon. It was apparent that robbery was not the motive for the crime, police said, for two diamond rings and a wedding ring were found on her fingers.

MORE YOUTHS IN ST. PAUL CHARGED WITH ROBBERIES

St. Paul, Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—Police today searched for two youths who late Friday held up nine employees of the Sanitary Farm Dairies company here and escaped with $1,000 in cash. They were believed members of the "school boy" gang held responsible for a score of Twin City oil station robberies in the past month.

LEON TROTZKY IS SUFFERING FROM ACUTE MALARIA

Berlin, Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—Leon Trotzky is suffering from acute malaria and lung trouble, a number of doctors reported after examining the exiled former Russian red army commander, a dispatch from Constantinople to the Telegraphen Union said today.

BE GENERAL THROUGHOUT
GREECE

COMMUNICATIONS ARE DISRUPT-ED, BUSINESS PARALYZED
IN ATHENS

London, Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—A new cold wave swept through many sections of Europe today and blizzards were general throughout Greece, especially in Athens where communications were disrupted and business paralyzed.

Black snow fell at Ruschuk, the phenomenon being attributed to volcanic dust. Constantinople was hit by a heavy blizzard and snow lay over the Turkish capital a foot deep. Gates hindered Black sea shipping.

Famine threatened several districts in Lithuania, Kovno, dispatches said, especially in the Jolischkis and Birschli sections. Cold and crop failures of the past year have caused the food shortage.

Greece and Turkey were hit by serious floods after thaws.

Unofficial estimates said the unprecedentedly severe winter weather has killed at least 20,000 persons, thousands of head of stock, and caused millions of dollars damage to ships and other property.

Floods in Macedonia and Thrace of the past few days were estimated to have damaged fifty per cent of the land under cultivation and to have drowned 300 horses and 1,500 sheep.

FRANKFORT'S OLD STATE CAPITOL IS DAMAGED BY FIRE

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—The right wing of the old state capitol housing offices of the state highway department, the railroad commission and the geological survey was destroyed by fire today. The blaze apparently started from defective wiring. Damage was estimated at $250,000. Valuable records and instruments were believed destroyed.

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—The Graf Zeppelin will leave here March 26, it was definitely announced today, on a flight which will follow a course through France, near the Rhone, over Corsica, Italy, in the vicinity of Rome, Greece, Asia Minor and the north coast of Africa.

Wichita, Kan., Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—Just before taking off on the fourth leg of his inspection trip of western airlines, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh admitted today that his forthcoming marriage to Miss Anne Morrow would tend to curtail his flying activities.

"Will your marriage keep you on the ground more than at present?" a reporter asked.

Hesitating a second, Lindbergh smiled and replied:

"Yes."

He refused to enlarge on the answer or to comment on his recently announced engagement.

He left here at 7:15 in a borrowed plane, presumably for Wynoka, Kan. His own plane was disabled in Kansas City.

SHIP OF AMERICA'S INTER-NATIONAL POLICIES

URGES THE CULTIVATION OF IN-TERNATIONAL GOOD FEELING

Washington, Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—Diplomats applauded today what was generally interpreted as a new appeal by President Coolidge for American adherence to the world court.

The president's remarks were in an address at George Washington University last night, giving an account of his stewardship of America's international relations since taking office in 1923.

In what probably was his last presidential utterance, Mr. Coolidge urged cultivation of international good feeling and called upon the people and the press of the nation to "be friendly."

He declared that rarely if ever have our foreign relations been in a more happy condition and discouraged the attitude of fault finding and hostility to everything that is foreign.

"It is possible to say of our foreign relations at the present time that they have rarely been in more happy condition," the president said in his summary of international affairs.

A burst of vigorous applause greeted his declaration that "competent and experienced observers have assured me that our relations with South America are on the most satisfactory basis that they have been for 25 years." He declared "our government is on the most cordial and friendly terms with all the European nations."

George Washington's career was held up as a symbol of the historical bond between the English-speaking peoples.

The honorary degree of doctor of laws was conferred on the president and Mrs. Coolidge by the university.

Mexico City, Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—A bomb explosion wrecked the walls of the headquarters of the national revolutionary party at Cuernavaca, Morelos. No one was reported injured.

Dortmund, Germany, Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—Three persons were killed and 17 were injured when a railway coach overturned here today as it passed over the switches in the station limits.

MOTHER INSTINCT OF LONELY WOMAN GIVEN THE BLAME

ASSIGNED AS REASON FOR DIS-APPEARANCE OF DORIS VIR-GINIA MURPHY

MRS. EDNA SHARP OF SAN FRAN-CISCO BREAKS DOWN AND CONFESSES

San Francisco, Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—The mother instinct of a lonely woman was given as the reason today for the disappearance of four-year-old Doris Virginia Murphy from a city playground eight days ago.

After hours of questioning by the police, during which she told a number of contradictory stories, Mrs. Edna Sharp late last night broke down and confessed that she had taken little Doris from the playground. Mrs. Sharp, her husband, Charles, and John A. Williams, were arrested on charges of kidnapping when Doris identified Williams as the "dark man" whom she said had kidnapped her.

Mrs. Sharp first told of receiving Doris from a "dark" man at Vallejo, north of this city on San Francisco Bay. Under continuous questioning of police, she finally burst into tears and said she "took Doris because she wanted a child of her own to love."

The confession climaxed the greatest hunt this city has ever known. An enraged populace had feared Doris was in the hands of a degenerate.

Her fate was not known until Charles Sharp brought the little girl to the offices of the United Press and said his wife was convinced the baby was not her own.

He said his wife was given the child when she obeyed a mysterious note telling her to go to Vallejo and a "dark" man would return to her a baby daughter whom she had placed in the care of a relative more than a year ago.

The American legation reported that heavy fighting was in progress near Chefoo. Casualties were unknown.

WITNESS IN GANG MASSACRE FADES AWAY

DEATH THREAT LETTERS RE-CEIVED BY 2 OTHERS, SAY
CHICAGO POLICE

DENTIST, WHO PULLED TOOTH OF ALLEGED GANGSTER, REPORTED MISSING

Chicago, Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—An important witness in the investigation of the St. Valentine's day gang massacre here has disappeared, police announced today and death threat letters have been received by two others.

Dr. Loyal Tacker, dentist, who said he believed he may have pulled a tooth of one of the men seen in the automobile which drove away from the north side garage where the murders occurred, was reported missing from his home by his bride of a few months.

Police were told by a witness who saw the car leave the garage that one of the men had a tooth or two missing. Dr. Tacker appeared at police headquarters a few days later and identified pictures of a gangster as those of a man whose teeth he had abstracted a short time before the murders.

Police fear that he may have been "taken for a ride" to prevent his giving further identification.

The threatening letters were received by Mrs. Alphonsine Morin and Mrs. Jeanette Landsman. Mrs. Morin lives directly across from the garage in which the seven men were lined up and shot down. Mrs. Landsman lives next door to the garage.

The letters advised the women to "keep your mouth shut." One letter said "that's the best thing that's happened around here," apparently referring to the massacre.

Both women had been questioned by police and they were to be questioned again.

Mrs. Tacker said her husband left their apartment last night and did not return. She became worried and notified police early this morning. Police were inclined to believe he had been kidnapped.

AMENDMENT ADOPTED CUTS OFF ALL FUNDS

ACTION FATHERED BY THE IN-DEPENDENT GROUP AND DEMOCRATS

WOULD SERIOUSLY HANDICAP U.
S. POLICY IN NICARAGUA,
SAYS KELLOGG

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Feb. 23.—While good republican voters were at home eating dinner last night, the independent group and the democrats succeeded in forcing the senate to adopt 38 to 30 an amendment cutting off funds for marine occupation of Nicaragua. A call was sent out this morning by the republican whip to have all voters present this afternoon to overturn last night's vote.

The amendment was proposed to the naval appropriations bill by Sen. Dill, democrat, Washington, who has long been conducting a fight against what he calls "American imperialism" in Central America.

Dill asked a restriction be placed on appropriations for the marine corps and the navy so no money could be used after July 1 to maintain troops in Nicaragua or to transport them there.

For six hours the senate had dined through debate. So useless appeared the efforts to defeat the naval bill, the midwesterners abandoned their fight to eliminate or curtail the appropriation of $12,370,000 for starting work on the new naval cruisers.

Amendments authorizing these expenditures were approved without the formality of a record vote.

Chairman Hale agreed to a roll call on the Dill amendment and when the roll was tabulated it was found many administration votes were absent including that of Vice-President-elect Curtis, the republican floor leader.

Hale immediately recessed the senate, announcing he would force another vote later today. He believes he will eliminate the amendment with all voters present.

The marine situation ties up with the next item of the senate business which is the Edge resolution proposing $150,000,000 to build an inter-oceanic canal across Nicaragua.

Dill has been fighting this resolution too, on the ground it will be used as excuse to continue marine occupation of the Central American republic.

Washington, Feb. 23.—The senate amendment to the naval appropriation bill designed to compel the administration to withdraw marines from Nicaragua, would seriously handicap United States policy in Nicaragua if it became a law, Secretary of State Kellogg said today.

Secretary Kellogg called at the White House today and discussed the new Nicaraguan development with President Coolidge.

Approximately 1,500 marines and 300 sailors have been withdrawn from Nicaragua and about 3,500 remain, he said. The secretary explained the United States had agreed to train the Nicaraguan national guard which is to consist of about 1,200 men. Thirty-nine marine officers in Nicaragua now are detailed for this training purpose.

The United States, he continued, intends to withdraw all marines as soon as possible.

Start Non-Stop Flight From Canada to Havana

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—Heavily burdened with 250 gallons of gasoline, George W. Haldeman, ocean flier, and his mechanic, James F. Hayden, took off from the Walker airport near here early today on an attempted non-stop flight from Canada to Havana. Two previous attempts to cover the 1,404 mile course between Canada and Cuba made by Leonard S. Flo failed. Haldeman was flying a Bellanca monoplane.

London, Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—General W. Bramwell Booth, deposed commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, suffered a slight relapse yesterday, it was understood from authoritative sources. Some anxiety was caused by the report.

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Feb. 23.—While good republican voters were at home eating dinner last night, the independent group and the democrats succeeded in forcing the senate to adopt 38 to 30 an amendment cutting off funds for marine occupation of Nicaragua. A call was sent out this morning by the republican whip to have all voters present this afternoon to overturn last night's vote.

The amendment was proposed to the naval appropriations bill by Sen. Dill, democrat, Washington, who has long been conducting a fight against what he calls "American imperialism" in Central America.

Dill asked a restriction be placed on appropriations for the marine corps and the navy so no money could be used after July 1 to maintain troops in Nicaragua or to transport them there.

For six hours the senate had clogged through debate. So useless appeared the efforts to defeat the naval bill, the midwesterners abandoned their fight to eliminate or curtail the appropriation of $12,370,000 for starting work on the new naval cruisers.

Amendments authorizing these expenditures were approved without the formality of a record vote.

Chairman Hale agreed to a roll call on the Dill amendment and when the roll was tabulated it was found many administration votes were absent including that of Vice-President-elect Curtis, the republican floor leader.

Hale immediately recessed the senate, announcing he would force another vote later today. He believes he will eliminate the amendment with all voters present.

The marine situation ties up with the next item of the senate business which is the Edge resolution proposing $150,000,000 to build an inter-oceanic canal across Nicaragua.

Dill has been fighting this resolution too, on the ground it will be used as an excuse to continue marine occupation of the Central American republic.

Washington, Feb. 23.—The senate amendment to the naval appropriation bill designed to compel the administration to withdraw marines from Nicaragua, would seriously handicap United States policy in Nicaragua if it became a law, Secretary of State Kellogg said today.

Secretary Kellogg called at the White House today and discussed the new Nicaraguan development with President Coolidge.

Approximately 1,500 marines and 300 sailors have been withdrawn from Nicaragua and about 3,500 remain, he said. The secretary explained the United States had agreed to train the Nicaraguan national guard which is to consist of about 1,200 men. Thirty-nine marine officers in Nicaragua now are detailed for this training purpose.

The United States, he continued, intends to withdraw all marines as soon as possible.

Start Non-Stop Flight From Canada to Havana

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—Heavily burdened with 250 gallons of gasoline, George W. Haldeman, ocean flier, and his mechanic, James F. Hayden, took off from the Walker airport near here early today on an attempted non-stop flight from Canada to Havana. Two previous attempts to cover the 1,404 mile course between Canada and Cuba made by Leonard S. Flo failed. Haldeman was flying a Bellanca monoplane.

London, Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—General W. Bramwell Booth, deposed commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, suffered a slight relapse yesterday, it was understood from authoritative sources. Some anxiety was caused by the report.

Ruins of frame house in which five sleeping children of John and Katherine Ooms were burned to death as fire destroyed their home at Lansing, Ill. The mother, father and sixth child, all of whom were rescued by neighbors, are in a critical condition at Hammond (Ind.) hospital. The blaze started when Ooms spilled grease on the stove.

Pupils of Miss Elizabeth Johnstone Appear in Recital of Unusual Merit

GENUINE INTEREST GIVEN

Poise and Method of Execution and Expression Were Decidedly Outstanding

A recital of unusual merit was presented by the younger piano pupils of Miss Elizabeth Johnstone Thursday evening at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. M. Johnstone.

The children taking part ranged in age from four years to 10. The class was started in October and many began their first piano playing at that time, although a few started even later and others had some previous instruction.

Much genuine interest and approval was evidenced by the audience from the first. This was directed in the beginning, chiefly to the announcement and explanation of the pieces by each little player. Many of the "analyses" were the children's own ideas of their pieces.

As the recital progressed, this interest persisted and increased, for the children not only spoke (and bowed) in the most charming manner, but played confidently, accurately and above all artistically.

A few points were decidedly outstanding. One was the poise of each of these 20 children, most of them appearing in their first recital, before an audience of about 175. Every child was at ease at the keyboard and knew exactly what he was aiming to do in the way of execution and expression.

Another noticeable point was the children's attitude toward their teacher—each one sending her a look of trust and admiration and receiving in return inspiration and approval.

The other strong feature was the very evident artistry of Miss Johnstone's teaching. These children are being taught from the beginning a correct hand position, relaxation of muscle, phrasing and expression. The lack of "humdrumness" in their playing was striking. They had an idea about each piece and they got their interpretation across to their audience and in so doing, enjoyed their own playing the more.

The innovation of the evening was presented by the youngest performer, "Nanny Bobs" Hitch. Without faltering at any time, this tiny four-year-old gave in an even, steady voice a long dissertation on the Mozart children. This story was in a booklet used by the Saturday Morning Study club, and after it had been read to her several times it was discovered that she had actually memorized it.

The study club is composed of the piano pupils who took part and the following in addition: Robert Egan, Fred Stout, Robert Alderman, Wilber Knudsen, Elizabeth Egan, Elizabeth Hoffman and Florence Richards. Joseph Cibuzar is its president and Elaine Tracy the treasurer. At their meetings the children sing, study composers and are instructed in the theory of music.

In the preparedness and style of her pupils' playing Miss Johnstone proves herself to be a valuable member of Brainerd's musical world—a thorough and decidedly artistic teacher of the young.

After the recital, books and charts prepared by the study club were on exhibition and frappe and waters served to the guests.

RULES ON PETITIONS

Persons Acting as Witnesses on Petitions Must Prove Themselves Citizens

George N. Danielson, federal naturalization examiner, announced this week that persons who act as witnesses on petitions for citizenship, if naturalized, must produce their certificates of citizenship when they appear before him with the applicant on the filing day. If they do not, certificates will have to be produced in court at the hearing. The notice to the alien to file a petition states that witnesses must produce proof of citizenship, but of late, many have not been observing this requirement. Hereafter it will be strictly required, Mr. Danielson said.

"A card showing that the witnesses has registered as a voter will not be accepted as proof of citizenship, as I have found instances of people who were not citizens holding registration cards," he declared.

"The certificates of citizenship is the best evidence and must be exhibited by witnesses hereafter. The law requires that witnesses on a petition for citizenship must be citizens and to protect the applicant from a dismissal of his petition, the witnesses must prove citizenship."

BRAINERD PRODIGY TO GIVE RECITAL

Alice Regina Johnson to be Guest Pianist of Brainerd Musical Club

SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Artist Will Give Short Explanation of Each Number Before Playing It

The following program will be given by Miss Alice Regina Johnson at Elks' hall on Sunday, February 24, at 3 P. M. This concert is under the auspices of the Musical club, but is given as a special number and is not included in the course covered by the season tickets. Special tickets have been printed for this concert, which may be procured at the door.

It is a delightful custom of Miss Johnson to give a short explanation of each number before playing it. Some of these analyses are in the form of poems—or they have inspired poetry by the study of their interpretation. She has written more than 200 poems in this way.

The program follows:

Choral prelude..... Bach-Busoni

Sonata Op. 28 (Pastorale)..... Beethoven

Allegro

Andante

Scherzo

Rondo

Scenes From Childhood..... Schumann

Impromptu in F Sharp Major..... Chopin

Grande Valse Brillante..... Chopin

Ballade Op. 47..... Chopin

In a Chinese Laundry..... Mullinger

(Dedicated to A. R. J.)

Music Box..... Sauer

Molto Vivace (from "Ruralia Hungarica")..... Dohnanji

REVIEWS LIFE OF W. C. T. U. FOUNDER

Dr. Grace Williams Reads Prose on
Miss Frances E.
Willard Here

The W. C. T. U. met Sunday afternoon, February 17 at the Baptist church commemorating Miss Frances
E. Willard's birthday, founder of the
W. C. T. U. The following was read
by Dr. Grace Williams:

Ninety years ago February 18,
Frances E. Willard was born at Churchville, N. Y. When she was
seven years of age her parents moved
to Wisconsin, settling near Janesville on the Rock River. Here they built a large comfortable house
which was the Willard homestead
for 40 years. Frances spent 12 happy years here with her brother,
Oliver and sister, Mary.

She was a great lover of all outdoors, especially enjoying the flowers which the children loved to garden for mother or teacher. Miss Willard once exclaimed, "Happy is the
woman to whom children give flowers!" She was at Toronto, Canada,
at the time, to speak before a large audience, and a little girl representing a thousand children seated on
the platform had just presented her with a bouquet of white roses. She told the children of her happy days
on the farm, and said the white ribbon emblem of the Women's Christian Temperance Union and the white petals of the roses signified to
her the ideal habits of life that would bring to them and their future homes
peace, purity, prohibition and prosperity.

Miss Willard was a born organizer
and when a mere child drew up a charter for a city the children had built in play. There were to be no saloons or poolhalls and so no need
of jails.

Miss Willard attended the country
school with her brother and sister,
then she and Mary had two years at
a select school at Janesville and later
to Milwaukee to a female school.

An aunt, Mrs. Sarah Hill was a teacher of history here and Frances found in her the greatest intellectual guide. The next year the girls attended Northwestern university, at Evanston, Ill. Frances was a leader

in scholarship and school activities
and became valedictorian of her class. At the age of 21 she began teaching in a country school, but later worked in city schools and universities. In 1862 her sister Mary passed on, a loss keenly felt by the loving heart. The brother sold the old home and went to Colorado, while Frances worked harder than ever to forget her loneliness. Later she traveled in Europe for several years,
studying and writing several books.

In 1883 Miss Willard and her friend, Anna A. Gordon made a temperance organization trip visiting
every state and territory in the union, organizing Women's Christian Temperance Unions. In the same year she became the national president. In 1892 Miss Willard and Miss Gordon went to England at the invitation of Lady Henry Somerset
where they worked for two years organizing unions.

Miss Willard was a patriotic seer,
an ardent lover and friend of humanity, with wide vision, daring
courage, and invincible faith.

She rallied and organized for the
mighty struggle against the legalized
liquor traffic, the women of the home, the church, the school, the farm, and the business world, that victoriously culminated in the passage of 18th amendment to the constitution of the United States. This is one of greatest moral and social
triumphs of history.

At the age of 60 this beloved and greatest woman of the nineteenth century went to her heavenly home,
yet today we are thrilled with the music of her persuasive voice as she reminds us, the twentieth century awakened voting womanhood, that "mother love works magic but organized mother love works miracles." Pray devoutly and hammer
away stoutly against the nullifiers
and strongly united enemies of our prohibition law. To every nation
she sent her message a clarion call
proclaiming protection for the home
and the child through the outlawing
of liquor and the opium trade, the
enfranchisement of women, the
establishment of courts of international arbitration, and the triumph
of Christ's golden rule in custom and
in law.

London, Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—King George
will be moved to Sandringham during the month of May, it was understood
today. He will be taken from Bognor,
where he is recovering, and leave later
on a Mediterranean cruise.

The Prince of Wales came here today

REVIEWS LIFE OF W. C. T. U. FOUNDER

Dr. Grace Williams Reads Prose on
Miss Frances E.
Willard Here

The W. C. T. U. met Sunday afternoon, February 17 at the Baptist
church commemorating Miss Frances
E. Willard's birthday, founder of the
W. C. T. U. The following was read
by Dr. Grace Williams:

Ninety years ago February 18,
Frances E. Willard was born at Churchville, N. Y. When she was
seven years of age her parents moved
to Wisconsin, settling near Janes-
ville on the Rock River. Here they
built a large comfortable house
which was the Willard homestead
for 40 years. Frances spent 12 happy years here with her brother,
Oliver and sister, Mary.

She was a great lover of all out-
doors, especially enjoying the flowers which the children loved to gather for mother or teacher. Miss Willard once exclaimed, "Happy is the
woman to whom children give flowers!" She was at Toronto, Canada,
at the time, to speak before a large
audience, and a little girl representing a thousand children seated on
the platform had just presented her
with a bouquet of white roses. She told the children of her happy days
on the farm, and said the white ribbon emblem of the Women's Christian Temperance Union and the
white petals of the roses signified to
her the ideal habits of life that would
bring to them and their future homes
peace, purity, prohibition and prosperity.

Miss Willard was a born organizer
and when a mere child drew up a
charter for a city the children had
built in play. There were to be no
saloons or poolhalls and so no need
of jails.

Miss Willard attended the country
school with her brother and sister,
then she and Mary had two years at
a select school at Janesville and later
to Milwaukee to a female school.

An aunt, Mrs. Sarah Hill was a teacher of history here and Frances
found in her the greatest intellectual guide. The next year the girls attended Northwestern university, at Evanston, Ill. Frances was a leader

in scholarship and school activities
and became valedictorian of her class. At the age of 21 she began teaching in a country school, but
later worked in city schools and universities. In 1862 her sister Mary
passed on, a loss keenly felt by the loving heart. The brother sold the
old home and went to Colorado, while Frances worked harder than ever to forget her loneliness. Later she
traveled in Europe for several years,
studying and writing several books.

In 1883 Miss Willard and her
friend, Anna A. Gordon made a temperance organization trip visiting
every state and territory in the
union, organizing Women's Christian Temperance Unions. In the same
year she became the national president. In 1892 Miss Willard and Miss Gordon went to England at the
invitation of Lady Henry Somerset
where they worked for two years organizing unions.

Miss Willard was a patriotic seer,
an ardent lover and friend of humanity, with wide vision, daring
courage, and invincible faith.

She rallied and organized for the
mighty struggle against the legalized
liquor traffic, the women of the
home, the church, the school, the
farm, and the business world, that victoriously culminated in the passage of 18th amendment to the constitution of the United States. This is one of greatest moral and social
triumphs of history.

At the age of 60 this beloved and
greatest woman of the nineteenth
century went to her heavenly home,
yet today we are thrilled with the
music of her persuasive voice as she reminds us, the twentieth century awakened voting womanhood, that "mother love works magic but
organized mother love works miracles." Pray devoutly and hammer
away stoutly against the nullifiers
and strongly united enemies of our prohibition law. To every nation
she sent her message a clarion call
proclaiming protection for the home
and the child through the outlawing
of liquor and the opium trade, the
enfranchisement of women, the
establishment of courts of international arbitration, and the triumph
of Christ's golden rule in custom and
in law.

London, Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—King George
will be moved to Sandringham during
the month of May, it was understood
today. He will be taken from Bognor,
where he is recovering, and leave later
on a Mediterranean cruise.

The Prince of Wales came here today

then walked along the boxes, strok-

BETTER THINK TWICE

THERE'S an old saying that "whatever goes up must come down." That thousands do not believe in it is evident from the way the stock market has been conducting itself the past year. A good many learned the truthfulness of the old saying a few weeks ago, when the Federal Reserve Board tightened up money rates and a lot of speculators "got hit," says the Stillwater Post-Messenger.

But thousands of others are still unmindful of the example. They are pouring their earnings into stocks that are now going up and up. Other thousands are even taking their hard-earned savings from the banks and using the money for speculative purposes. "Buy on a rising market" is Wall Street's advice, and nobody seems to believe that "whatever goes up must come down."

It is not our desire to meddle in the business affairs of any one in Stillwater. But this is our town, and everyone here is our neighbor, in whom we have an interest. For that reason we want to urge them to do a lot of sound, sober thinking before putting their money into the stock market. Older bankers and brokers are cautious and do not hesitate to shake their heads in a suggestive way. That should be warning enough for the man who isn't as well posted in stock exchange manipulations as they are. If they "smell a mouse" it's about time for the amateur speculator to keep his money in his pocket. The bottom must be due to drop out pretty soon or these conservative financiers would not be reminding us that "whatever goes up must come down."

WASHINGTON PORTRAITS

Two or three biographers of recent days, in an apparent effort to blot out Parson Weems' picture of Washington who couldn't or wouldn't tell a lie, have painted the Father of His Country in contrary colors, says the St. Cloud Daily Times. They have gone to the other extreme. Certainly they will fail if they try to picture him as a profane, swashbuckling cavalier, defiant of conventions and boastful of deeds. There is too much documentary evidence to the contrary.

"Happy in the confirmation of our independence and sovereignty," wrote General Washington in 1783, resigning his commission as commander-in-chief of the army, "and pleased with the opportunity afforded the United States of becoming a respectable nation, I resign with satisfaction the appointment accepted with diffidence; a diffidence in my ability to accomplish so arduous a task, which, however, was superseded by a confidence in the rectitude of our cause, the support of the supreme power of the union, and the patronage of Heaven."

Other more familiar passages from his speeches and writings will bear like testimony, that some of these new pictures of George Washington are caricatures, not portraits. Probably the real Washington may be found some place between Weems of the Nineteenth century and and Rupert Hughes of the Twentieth.

SAGE REMARKS AT VARIOUS AGES

WILLIAM FEATHER is the editor of a trade journal, "The Imperial Type Metal Magazine," and the February issue contains much interesting matter. Under a heading, "Age and Observation," he has assembled favorite remarks at the various ages and to substantiate it, pick out your own age and parallel it with his observation.

At fifteen: "Let's go!"
At twenty: "Give me a chance and I'll show 'em."
At twenty-five: "It's all wrong. There must be reform."
At thirty: "I'll live to see the dawn of a new day. In a few years the people will wake up and demand their rights."
At thirty-five: "I'd be rich if I'd stayed single."
At forty: "I'm sick of reformers."
At forty-five: "What of it?"
At fifty: "Thank God I've got a bed."
At fifty-five: "The human race isn't worth saving."
At sixty: "I believed that once."
At sixty-five: "It won't work."
At seventy: "The world has changed."

BOYS CAMP REORGANIZED

RESORTERS already are beginning to wake up to the fact that spring is just around the corner in spite of prevailing cold waves, and are making preparations accordingly. One of the first to get into action is R. F. B. Cote, a former instructor at the University of Minnesota, who for the last six years has been director of Lincoln camp for boys at Lake Hubert.

As stated in the Dispatch, Mr. Cote announces a complete reorganization of the camp, extending its activities so as to take in girls as well as boys and increasing the age limit.

Building improvements of $10,000 or more have been made. Camp Lincoln is the oldest summer camp for boys in the state, having been founded in 1909. It has a fleet of seven sailboats, canoes, motor and speedboats, a sandy swimming beach, a rifle range, and 10 riding horses.

CARL ZAPFFE is on a business trip to New York and other eastern cities. In New York he will attend the annual meeting of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers. A bust of Herbert Hoover is to be unveiled, and if the president-elect is able to appear, a gold medal, awarded for outstanding achievements in the mining industry, will be given him.

BEFORE we are rid of one cold wave, the weather bureau tells us another sweep of cold is coming. This winter has produced a brand of weather breaking records for years past, and the oldest inhabitant hasn't a word to say.

EVERY dog has his day, says an old maxim, but the biggest day in many a dog's life as well as that of his young owner, will be the American Legion Dog Derby set for Saturday, March 2.

BETTER THINK TWICE

THERE'S an old saying that "whatever goes up must come down." That thousands do not believe in it is evident from the way the stock market has been conducting itself the past year. A good many learned the truthfulness of the old saying a few weeks ago, when the Federal Reserve Board tightened up money rates and a lot of speculators "got hit," says the Stillwater Post-Messenger.

But thousands of others are still unmindful of the example. They are pouring their earnings into stocks that are now going up and up. Other thousands are even taking their hard-earned savings from the banks and using the money for speculative purposes. "Buy on a rising market" is Wall Street's advice, and nobody seems to believe that "whatever goes up must come down."

It is not our desire to meddle in the business affairs of any one in Stillwater. But this is our town, and everyone here is our neighbor, in whom we have an interest. For that reason we want to urge them to do a lot of sound, sober thinking before putting their money into the stock market. Older bankers and brokers are cautious and do not hesitate to shake their heads in a suggestive way. That should be warning enough for the man who isn't as well posted in stock exchange manipulations as they are. If they "smell a mouse" it's about time for the amateur speculator to keep his money in his pocket. The bottom must be due to drop out pretty soon or these conservative financiers would not be reminding us that "whatver goes up must come down."

WASHINGTON PORTRAITS

Two or three biographers of recent days, in an apparent effort to blot out Parson Weems' picture of Washington who couldn't or wouldn't tell a lie, have painted the Father of His Country in contrary colors, says the St. Cloud Daily Times. They have gone to the other extreme. Certainly they will fail if they try to picture him as a profane, swashbuckling cavalier, defiant of conventions and boastful of deeds. There is too much documentary evidence to the contrary.

"Happy in the confirmation of our independence and sovereignty," wrote General Washington in 1783, resigning his commission as commander-in-chief of the army, "and pleased with the opportunity afforded the United States of becoming a respectable nation, I resign with satisfaction the appointment accepted with diffidence; a diffidence in my ability to accomplish so arduous a task, which, however, was superseded by a confidence in the rectitude of our cause, the support of the supreme power of the union, and the patronage of Heaven."

Other more familiar passages from his speeches and writings will bear like testimony, that some of these new pictures of George Washington are caricatures, not portraits. Probably the real Washington may be found some place between Weems of the Nineteenth century and and Rupert Hughes of the Twentieth.

SAGE REMARKS AT VARIOUS AGES

WILLIAM FEATHER is the editor of a trade journal, "The Imperial Type Metal Magazine," and the February issue contains much interesting matter. Under a heading, "Age and Observation," he has assembled favorite remarks at the various ages and to substantiate it, pick out your own age and parallel it with his observation.

At fifteen: "Let's go!"
At twenty: "Give me a chance and I'll show 'em."
At twenty-five: "It's all wrong. There must be reform."
At thirty: "I'll live to see the dawn of a new day. In a few years the people will wake up and demand their rights."
At thirty-five: "I'd be rich if I'd stayed single."
At forty: "I'm sick of reformers."
At forty-five: "What of it?"
At fifty: "Thank God I've got a bed."
At fifty-five: "The human race isn't worth saving."
At sixty: "I believed that once."
At sixty-five: "It won't work."

BOYS CAMP REORGANIZED

RESORTERS already are beginning to wake up to the fact that spring is just around the corner in spite of prevailing cold waves, and are making preparations accordingly. One of the first to get into action is R. F. B. Cote, a former instructor at the University of Minnesota, who for the last six years has been director of Lincoln camp for boys at Lake Hubert.

As stated in the Dispatch, Mr. Cote announces a complete reorganization of the camp, extending its activities so as to take in girls as well as boys and increasing the age limit.

Building improvements of $10,000 or more have been made. Camp Lincoln is the oldest summer camp for boys in the state, having been founded in 1909. It has a fleet of seven sailboats, canoes, motor and speedboats, a sandy swimming beach, a rifle range, and 10 riding horses.

CARL ZAPFE is on a business trip to New York and other eastern cities. In New York he will attend the annual meeting of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers. A bust of Herbert Hoover is to be unveiled, and if the president-elect is able to appear, a gold medal, awarded for outstanding achievements in the mining industry, will be given him.

BEFORE we are rid of one cold wave, the weather bureau tells us another sweep of cold is coming. This winter has produced a brand of weather breaking records for years past, and the oldest inhabitant hasn't a word to say.

EVERY dog has his day, says an old maxim, but the biggest day in many a dog's life as well as that of his young owner, will be the American Legion Dog Derby set for Saturday, March 2.

GRAND MASTER ANDREW ANDERSON of Brainerd presided at the opening of the A. O. U. F. convention in Minneapolis this week, 350 delegates being in attendance.

YOUR personal property taxes are due and payable in this month of February. Why not pay them now instead of waiting to the last minute of the eleventh hour?

BARRELS OF FUN HAD AT MASON PARTY

Aurora Lodge's Washington Celebration Was Big Event in Lodge's History

300 ATTEND PROGRAM

Banquet Precedes Entertainment; Dance Concludes Big Evening

Take a barrel of logic, an equal portion of talent, wit, and nonsense, mix thoroughly and what is the result?

The Masons, their wives and sweethearts, the Eastern Star and their guests, and the DeMolays and their "bests" found out last night much to their delight.

There was more entertainment dished out in the space of three hours than could be crammed into an entire day of holiday making.

Washington's Birthday as observed by Aurora Lodge No. 100 was another red letter day in the annals of the lodge. It was another triumph that can be recorded in favor of Masonry.

The day started at 2:15 p. m. with the third degree being conferred upon three candidates, the work being exemplified by Past Masters of Aurora.

It continued at 6:15 p. m. when 194 Brainerd, Staples, Motley, Crosby and Aitkin Masons sat down at a banquet in the banquet hall. That banquet was one fit for a king.

R. R. Gould, toastmaster supreme, told a few stories sparkling with wit as an after dinner ceremonies opened.

He told the answer to the riddle: "What is a honeymoon?" His explanation was that "A honeymoon is a period in a girl's career which comes between the lipstick and the broomstick."

Mr. Gould read greetings from the following Masons who expressed regret at being unable to be present: E. J. Simon, Washington, D. C., grand master; W. G. Pirie, St. Louis, Mo.; Elmer R. Hetting, St. Paul; Henry A. Paterson, Bemidji; Mystic Lodge No. 213, Aitkin.

Worshipful Master Robert Falconer extended words of welcome to Brainerd and visiting Masons. He told that one of the candidates to receive the third degree yesterday afternoon was the first member of Roosevelt Chapter, DeMolay to become a Mason.

R. G. Harte, Pequot, district supervisor, spoke of his pleasure in attending Masonic gatherings in Brainerd.

Past Master Dr. G. I. Ribbel presented the Past Master's jewel to Past Master George Falconer as a token of appreciation of his work during the past year as Master.

Edward J. Egan urged all Masons to attend DeMolay meetings announcing that the next meeting would be held March 4 at which time initiation work would be exemplified.

A rising vote of thanks was extended to the Eastern Star and the DeMolays for serving the banquet.

More than 300 attended the program given in the beautiful Masonic hall.

The Musical Pirates of Little Falls who rendered selections during the banquet were on the opening number of program.

"The Optimist Trio," Evelyn Kees, soprano; Miltz Fleten, mezzo soprano; Rosalie Cartier, contralto; Gustav Schoettle, pianist and director, won the hearts of all with their delightful presentation of a group of five classical and popular numbers.

But it was Henry Gordien, magician and illusionist who caused a riot of mirth with his extremely clever presentation of sleight of hand tricks. He completely baffled the audience, demonstrating that the quickness of the hand deceiveth the eye. There was one trick that he did not attempt and that was to take a rabbit from a hat. Those present were still wondering today how he could place a colored handkerchief in an egg shell, then break the egg and what happened to the handkerchief; how he could transplant currency into a lemon; pour salt into another man's hand and have it appear in his own hand; swallow 25 needles and thread and have them appear threaded; give the correct total of four figures, one of which was a Brainerd lady's telephone number; and pick out the right cards chosen by members of the audience from the 52 in the deck. It was all most mysterious and bewildering, but highly entertaining.

Bishop G. G. Bennett, of Duluth, speaker of the evening spoke in part as follows:

"Brother Gould when he introduced me tonight carried out the definition of what I believe should be the function of a toastmaster or introducer. I happened to attend a convention in the east, and heard a man who has had a great deal of experience in introducing speakers of the evening say, 'You know, after all these years I have just now discovered what to say. It is all very simple.' I have wasted a great deal of my time and the patience of the audience, and here it is in a nutshell: 'Ladies and what came with you.' It is the privilege or prerogative of the toastmaster of the evening to waste your time and bore you with a long speech, but I shall simply introduce those who will.' And Brother Gould by the very brevity of his speech, left nothing to be desired along that line. I am always glad of the opportunity and feel very much at home with you people, the Masons and members of the Eastern Star, the wives and sweethearts of the Masons. The fact is that you come into a very distinct atmosphere when you come into the Masonic lodge, and this atmosphere tonight is quite distinctive. The last time I was here I could not see across the room, and now with the presence of the ladies we all can see as clearly as our eyes will permit. And so, ladies, I congratulate you tonight, for there can be no one stealing out under cover of the smoke. Last time three or four made their escape under the smoke screen.

"I am not going to speak on George Washington tonight because you have all heard of him, and no doubt know more about him than I do. It is very true that at the present time there is hardly any notable character who has not come before us in a new and startling guise in the past few years, some things to their credit and some to their discredit. Some things were better not to have known. They have shown us something of the failures of these notable men rather than magnify their virtues and this helps us no whit. There is no man that can stand out with greater credit than George Washington and so we might possibly spend a few moments in discussing George Washington. Many ideas on George Washington have been dispelled from our minds and among them that pleasant and instructive story of the cherry tree and doubly so tonight because we had cherry pie for dinner.

"Nevertheless, there are interesting facts connected with this man, George Washington, of course, was a Mason, and he stood for certain things for which it stands. Some of these things have been woven into our life today, and we are distinctly the debtors of that man who had the courage of his convictions and who obeyed these convictions under great and very strenuous opposition. I cannot help but believe that many times when the decision rested with himself alone that he must have found great solace in the fact that there were Masonic minded men all over the country who believed and acted with him on the great basis on which Masonry takes its foundation. And these things may have a more constructive and useful service than what we see today. We are apt sometimes to look at civilization as something apart from ourselves. Civilization is always in a state of flux, always and constantly changing and by that very fact that it is always changing, it becomes a live and not a dead thing. We speak of our civilization today, and even while we utter the words it is under a process of change. There are one or two things that civilization must be founded on, and George Washington emphatically emphasized these points.

"The civilization of which we are a part is a most interesting, most complex and most distinct thing, and just where it is tending we do not know, and just what will come out of it in the next 15 years no one can tell. No great civilization has ever felt its menace until too late, no great collection of people ever felt any weakness in their condition until too late and so you and I live sometimes in a state of false assurance. We are absolutely certain this civilization of ours will endure, and on what rights do we base such a judgment? There are certain stable qualities that will make this last forever. Are we like an ostrich hiding its head in the sands of false opinion, and refusing to face life as it is. We find that with the speeding of intercommunication of all parts of this world as in the past few years that we are not an isolated people, but we are bound together with every country which makes us interdependent to one another.

"We are not living by ourselves and each and everyone of us depend entirely upon someone else for our very sustenance. As a friend of mine said 'civilization is taking away from man their own initiative and independence and that with the advance and progress of man in science the time will come when there will be no need of the hand performing tasks—simply press a button and all will be done.' As man's accumulations of outward activities increase,

Houle Motor
South 5th Street

they more and more lose their independence, and more and more we are ourselves have introduced and ourselves have introduced and provoked. What would man do if he were suddenly deprived of all these. Could he preserve himself under adverse conditions? Would civilization be taken away? It reminds me of a book I read some time ago of flood conditions in Europe. People were deprived of all accumulations of years. Some survived and others died. Civilization slid off like the skin of a snake. It would be well to ask ourselves the question if such a thing happens to me, suppose by some strange circumstance, I should be robbed of all these things on which I am depending, what would I do? We cannot tell what will happen tomorrow. Many will say of course that could not happen, but we do not know. I do not expect that to happen tomorrow, but of this I am sure—I can feel and sense in myself there will be great and tremendous changes in the near future.

"There is a great restlessness, the like of which I have never sensed before. I have just returned from a ten days trip to Baltimore, Washington and New York, and I felt in all those centers more uncertainty and restlessness than I have ever known before. I feel there is something growing in life, but we are not certain of what it is.

"Life is not cut and dried, and into this great social caldron we keep constantly pouring things. What will come out? Civilization today is not the same as yesterday, nor is it today what it will be tomorrow. We have contributed something today that will in a measure change it. We do not know what it was, and if we did, we could not stand the strain. We go ahead and make contributions—we do not know where or why. Maybe it is good, and maybe it is bad. The contributions of yesterday made civilization what it is today, and our contributions today make the civilization of tomorrow insofar as human relationships are concerned. Take the automobile for instance. It lifted us out of the horse and buggy stage, and from the automobile period we are rapidly passing into the airplane period. It has brought about an entirely different relationship than we had in the world before. Therefore, when we speak of civilization, we speak of something that changes day by day, it is never the same today, yesterday or tomorrow, and we are the makers of it. The outside does not make us, we make it, but all too frequently are given to people tools to use for which they have not the normal sense to use. We have today things to use for which we are mechanically prepared, but not morally and socially, and therefore they raise havoc with the morals of society, business of society and government of society. In no time of the world has people's reaction to environment been greater than today. In the last ten years there has been a greater change in social conception and social life than in all the history of the Roman empire.

"We today enjoy the reaction to conditions of years ago. One of the most interesting, most unusual and most unheard of ideas came into governmental life with that phrase 'We the people.' For the first time in all the history of poor struggling humanity, the idea of authority had been taken away from one individual and one group of people who had been rulers by inheritance or by the divine right of kings and placed, for better or for worse, upon the shoulders of those who were to live under that kind of a government. The government was placed upon the shoulders of men and women who had formed it—we the people. Don't forget it is still in the experimental stage. It is not wise for us to be blind regarding our government.

"As with our friends, it is not wise to be blind to their faults, for despite their faults they are still our friends, so it is with our government. It is not perfect, nothing human is perfect. A perfect person would be like a dead person to live with. Therefore we come to the question of government—that it is an experiment. Why? Because it is 'We the People." The government will be different in the next generation. Recently the electoral college met, I did not know it until I read it in the papers. The government coming tomorrow probably will change because it will be a new government, a new people.

"Masonry comes in with two fundamental things. Your security today is only builded on two things that long years ago men saw were necessary and fought for and struggled for even to death—civil and religious freedom. We see our government formulate itself along these two unmistakable lines—civil and religious liberty. These are what we as Masons stand for, and what we shall pass on to that new government that comes tomorrow—that priceless heritage that comes to us 'Civil and Religious Liberties.'"

After the program a dance was held in the Iron Exchange hall.

UZCUDUN SURVIVES RIGHT OF CHRISTNER

BASQUE WOOD CHOPPER WINS BY WIDE MARGIN

UZCUDUN LOST FIRST ROUND,
THEN CAME STRONG IN BALANCE

CHRISTNER'S ONLY BIDS FOR VICTORY WERE IN 1ST, 6TH
AND 10TH ROUNDS

New York, Feb. 23. — (UP) — Paolino Uzcudun, Basque wood-chopper, is still one of the numerous "foremost heavyweight title contenders" today, having survived the right hand of Meyer (K. O.) Christner, in a 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden last night.

Uzcudun, after losing the first round to the lumbering heavy from Akron, O., came back to win a decision and by a wider margin than did Jack Sharkey when pitted against the same Christner last month.

Christner's only bids for victory were in the first, sixth and tenth rounds. In the final he made a desperate effort, putting all he had behind his feared right and shaking the Spaniard thoroughly. Many believed the Akronite was on the verge of a knockout those last minutes of the bout.

Paolino's lead was much too great to be lost by one poor round and the crowd was inclined to agree with the verdict of the judges.

The victory leaves Paolino in line for a match with the winner of the Sharkey-Stribling fight in Miami Beach next Wednesday.

Tigers Beat Junior High
The Tigers team of the Y. M. C. A. played the junior high at Aitkin last night as a preliminary to the Brainerd-Aitkin high school game. The Tigers won over their opponents, 20-6, even though Aitkin had more than a dozen different players to strengthen their team.

The locals displayed the tenacity of tigers in going after a win, and outstanding among the players was the speed and endurance which David Templeton showed.

The Tigers team consisted of Lyle Mayo, captain, Clausen brothers, D. Guin, D. Templeton, V. Marshall and Fred Doepeke.

This makes five consecutive wins for the Tigers and no games lost this winter. John Gablou acted as coach last night.

Brainerd's youthful reserves met defeat at the hands of Aitkin in a conference game last evening by the score of 22 to 13.

Aitkin started out with a lead and continued to hold it throughout the game. At half time the score was 11 to 9 in favor of Aitkin but in the second half Aitkin gradually pulled away from the Brainerd youths who did not play up to their first half form.

Sullivan was high scorer for the evening with five baskets for a total of ten points. For Brainerd, Schuety was high scorer with three baskets.

Aitkin showed improvement over its early season form and was hitting the hoop very regularly last night.

The Brainerd reserves, some of the Brainerd high, fouled occasionally during the first half which prevented them from going at top speed in the second half.

Art Hautala for Brainerd played one of the best games he played all year and was without a doubt one of the best men on the floor. Foster played a good defensive game, continually blocking many of Aitkin's shots.

The line-ups follow:
Brainerd—Schuety, Halvorson, E. Foster, Hoffbauer, forwards; Hautala, center; B. Foster, Goedderz and Garvey, guards.

Aitkin—Sullivan, Hartmann, Frederickson, forwards; Stevens, center; Richardson, Rickander and Hawley, guards.

Impatient Griselda by Dorothy Scarborough

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

IRENE ROBELINE was secretly in love with Guinn Holden, a handsome young Texas minister. But Guinn married Lilith, a beautiful, gay and coquettish blonde, who died a year later when the second Lilith was born. Irene then marries Guinn, turning down Will Lundy, who was in love with her. For eighteen years she struggled valiantly as the wife of Holden to win his heart, but always she knew that he was really in love with the "white and gold" ghost of the dead Lilith. It was the grown-up Lilith, now out of college, beautiful as her mother had been, but selfish and cold, who succeeded to her mother's place in her father's heart. Tina, Ross, Lundy and Patricia, Irene's own children by Holden, were all secondary to the proud Lilith in everything in the parson's household. Tina wore her cast-off clothes at college and worked at home, while Lilith visited. When Lilith became engaged to Roger Devereaux, son of wealthy parents, Irene was happy. Tina, the Cinderella girl, would then have her chance. But when a parishioner dies leaving $2,000 to her father Lilith prevails upon him to let her postpone the wedding to have a year of vocal study in New York. Her letters told of her dreams come true—freedom, broadened horizons, the exhilaration of the great city that fascinated her. Then she met Vivien Winthrop, a beautiful rich society girl with "horse sense," at her music teacher's. Invited to dinner, Lilith captivates Mr. Winthrop, as well as the young men, by her negro songs, while she revels in the luxury of the palatial surroundings. Bill Chester, heir to a huge fortune, and engaged to an heiress, asks her to the opera a week later. Lilith is entranced. This was followed by a house party at the Winthrop place on Long Island. Bill Chester invites them to his grandfather's estate and devotes much time to Lilith.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXXVI.
THE family missed Lilith. The parsonage seemed dull without her vivid dominating presence. Every day Irene found herself listening for her snatches of song, for a dainty ballad trilled from the porch, for her ripples of laughter, for her constant demands on everybody. Lilith would be saying a dozen times a day, when she was at home, "Mother, will you do this for me?" "Mother, let me do this for you." And now both girls were gone for a while, and some day before long they would be gone to stay, when they were married. Lilith would marry soon and well, because she was too lazy to earn her living, and too selfish to make a poor orphan. Tina, now, might easily throw herself away on a weakling, because of her tender heart. So the mother heart worried.

"It's great to have grown daughters," Irene had often laughed, when Lilith had derided her costume, or her carelessly done hair, or made fun of the way she let Sheba rule her, or the church impose upon her. "It's great to have grown daughters to boss you." Sometimes it had been true, when Tina had snatched an unfinished task from her hands, and made her lie down for a rest, or had reconciled a quarrel between the boys, or devised some pleasure for Pat.

Now the house had no grown daughter at all, with Lilith in New York and Tina at college.

Guinn missed Lilith terribly, and his transparent man nature showed it without reserve. He took Tina's absence for granted, but he could not adjust himself to Lilith's being away so far and for so long. Like a miasma over Irene's peace stole every day the realization of the difference he made between the two girls. Healed a wound in her heart that never healed was the knowledge that this difference came about because of the deathless love he bore for Lilith's mother, whom his tender memories of passion had idealized more and more with each year, while she, the loyal wife, the faithful household drudge, was forgotten!

She was too proud, too sensitive to speak a word for herself, to make any appeal for his love so far as she was concerned, but she would make a plea for justice for her child. Jealousy she would recall Tina to his mind, trying to make him miss his younger daughter, too.

"If Tina were here, she'd help you with those letters." "Yes," he would say abstractedly. And then a little later, "Did we get a letter from Lilith today?" "No, but we had one from Tina. Here it is."

"I'll read it by and by. Or you can tell me what's in it." "Or on another day, it might be: 'Guinn, won't you write Tina a note? She has won straight A's in all her work.'"

"Good. Give her my love." She spoke with firmness, "Guinn, I want you to write to Tina. She'll feel hurt never to hear from you."

Anger rose within her at such times, but she controlled it. She could not risk finding out too much about the girl who had been so much loved.

"You want to see Lilith get her degree."

"You go and I'll stay at home and look after the youngsters," he told her.

She faced him, her brown eyes challenging his. "Guinn, I have often told you that you make a great difference in your treatment of the two girls. It isn't fair, Guinn, honestly—it's cruel! It has caused Tina many a headache from her childhood. Some day it may estrange her from you."

Cold anger shook her, and a mist blurred her eyes, but she spoke quietly.

He stared at her in amazement, resentment.

She hurried on. "It's seldom that I ask you to do anything for my pleasure, but I can't bear it if you don't go with me to see our Tina get her degree!"

She flung her hands out in a passionate gesture.

"All right," he said, as a flush spread over his face, and he made a gesture as if to stop her from further argument. "I think you are oversentimentalizing a situation, but I'll go, if that's the way you feel about it."

She kissed him quickly, and left the room.

She had wrung this justice from him for Tina, but who would win recognition from him for her, as against the dead rival? She knew one black moment of jealousy and rage and despair. She struggled the half wish she had never married this man, never seen him! Will Lundy would never have treated her and her children like this. Will Lundy loved Tina right now better than her own father did. Then she shook her body vehemently, as to shake off a blasphemy. She must have faith, have patience, and God would make things right in time. But, oh, if only God weren't so—leisurely!

When Irene and Guinn went to see Tina get her degree from Baylor University in June, Will Lundy went with them.

"Tina's my girl," he boasted. "The sweetest thing that ever lived."

She did look sweet, as she stood under an old oak tree on the campus to receive congratulations after the commencement exercises were over, her cap set jauntily on her boyish, bobbed hair, her brown eyes shining, her black scholar's gown giving an incongruous look to her feminine slightness and youth.

"I'm all educated," she cried to her father, waving her diploma at him. "Now I shan't need to learn another thing as long as I live."

Irene's heart contracted with love and pride, and with an apprehension for the future. "You baby," she scoffed. "You don't know anything about life. There's everything to learn."

"Well, she's got a good mind. She learns fast," put in Will Lundy loudly.

He gave Tina a diamond and platinum wrist watch for her graduation present, just such a gift as Guinn had bought for Lilith when she got her degree the year before.

Irene's eyes misted as Tina threw her arms about the doctor's neck and kissed him impulsively. She might have been his daughter. Perhaps she should have been his daughter.

"Your father and I have had your room done over for our present, darling," she told her.

But she had done that all herself with her wedding fees, and she had reminded Guinn more than once to buy Tina a present himself. She hadn't wanted to pick one out and to pay for it and cheat her self and Tina with thinking that he had remembered, when he hadn't.

Nobody had had to remind him to buy a platinum and diamond wrist watch for Lilith, because Lilith had once merely hinted to him that that was what she wanted most. Would Tina notice the difference?

If she did, she said nothing about it—but then Tina had her own pride and independence that fought off sympathy when she was really hurt. Children were so secretive! When they were little, they showed you their bumped heads, and scratched knees, and a kiss from Mother healed the hurt; but when they were older they hid their heartaches from you, and Mother's kiss couldn't cure...

UZCUDUN SURVIVES RIGHT OF CHRISTNER

BASQUE WOOD CHOPPER WINS BY WIDE MARGIN

UZCUDUN LOST FIRST ROUND,
THEN CAME STRONG IN BALANCE

CHRISTNER'S ONLY BIDS FOR VICTORY WERE IN 1ST, 6TH
AND 10TH ROUNDS

New York, Feb. 23. — (UP) — Paolino Uzcudun, Basque wood-chopper, is still one of the numerous "foremost heavyweight title contenders" today, having survived the right hand of Meyer (K. O.) Christner, in a 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden last night.

Uzcudun, after losing the first round to the lumbering heavy from Akron, O., came back to win a decision and by a wider margin than did Jack Sharkey when pitted against the same Christner last month.

Christner's only bids for victory were in the first, sixth and tenth rounds. In the final he made a desperate effort, putting all he had behind his feared right and shaking the Spaniard thoroughly. Many believed the Akronite was on the verge of a knockout those last minutes of the bout.

Paolino's lead was much too great to be lost by one poor round and the crowd was inclined to agree with the verdict of the judges.

The victory leaves Paolino in line for a match with the winner of the Sharkey-Stribling fight in Miami Beach next Wednesday.

The Tigers team of the Y. M. C. A. played the junior high at Aitkin last night as a preliminary to the Brainerd-Aitkin high school game. The Tigers won over their opponents, 20-6, even though Aitkin had more than a dozen different players to strengthen their team.

The locals displayed the tenacity of tigers in going after a win, and outstanding among the players was the speed and endurance which David Templeton showed.

The Tigers team consisted of Lyle Mayo, captain, Clausen brothers, D. Guin, D. Templeton, V. Marshall and Fred Doepeke.

This makes five consecutive wins for the Tigers and no games lost this winter. John Gabiou acted as coach last night.

For eighteen years she struggled valiantly as the wife of Holden to win his heart, but always she knew that he was really in love with the "white and gold" ghost of the dead Lilith. It was the grown-up Lilith, now out of college, beautiful as her mother had been, but selfish and cold, who succeeded to her mother's place in her father's heart. Tina, Ross, Lundy and Patricia, Irene's own children by Holden, were all secondary to the proud Lilith in everything in the parson's household. Tina wore her cast-off clothes at college and worked at home, while Lilith visited. When Lilith became engaged to Roger Devereaux, son of wealthy parents, Irene was happy. Tina, the Cinderella girl, would then have her chance. But when a parishioner dies leaving $2,000 to her father Lilith prevails upon him to let her postpone the wedding to have a year of vocal study in New York. Her letters told of her dreams come true—freedom, broadened horizons, the exhilaration of the great city that fascinated her. Then she met Vivien Winthrop, a beautiful rich society girl with "horse sense," at her music teacher's. Invited to dinner, Lilith captivated Mr. Winthrop, as well as the young men, with her negro songs, while she revels in the luxury of the palatial surroundings. Bill Chester, heir to a huge fortune, and engaged to an heiress, asks her to the opera a week later. Lilith is entranced. This was followed by a house party at the Winthrop place on Long Island. Bill Chester invites them to his grandfather's estate and devotes much time to Lilith.

CHAPTER XXXVI.
THE family missed Lilith. The paragon seemed dull without her vivid dominating presence. Every day Irene found herself listening for her snatches of song, for a dainty laugh, for her constant demands on everybody. Lilith would be saying a dozen times a day, when she was at home, "Mother, will you do this for me?" Tina would be saying as often, "Mother, let me do this for you." And now both girls were gone for a while, and some day before long they would be gone to stay, when they were married. Lilith would marry soon and well, because she was too lazy to earn her living, and too selfish to make a poor match. Tina, now, might easily throw herself away on a weakling, because of her tender heart. So the mother heart worried.

It's great to have grown daughters. Irene had often laughed, when Lilith had derided her costume, or her carelessly done hair, or made fun of the way she let Sheba rule her, or the church impose upon her. "It's great to have grown daughters to boss you." Sometimes it had been, "It's great to have grown daughters," when Tina had snatched a book from her hands, and made her lie down for a rest, or had reconciled a quarrel between the boys, or devised some pleasure for Pat.

Now the house had no grown daughter at all, with Lilith in New York and Tina at college. Guinn missed Lilith terribly, and his transparent nature showed it without reserve. He took Tina's absence for granted, but he could not adjust himself to Lilith's being away so far and for so long.

A miasma over Irene's peace stole every day the realization of the difference he made between the two girls. Like a wound in her heart that never healed was the knowledge that this difference came about because of the deathless love he bore for Lilith's mother, whom his tender memories of passion had idealized more and more with each year, while she, the loyal wife, the faithful household drudge, was forgotten!

She was too proud, too sensitive to speak a word for herself, to make any appeal for his love so far as she was concerned, but she would make a plea for justice for her child. Jealousy she would recall Tina to his mind, trying to make him miss his younger daughter, too.

"If Tina were here, she'd help you with those letters."
"Yes," he would say abstractedly. And then a little later, "Did we get a letter from Lilith today?"
"No, but we had one from Tina. Here it is."

"I'll read it by and by. Or you can tell me what's in it."
Or on another day, it might be: "Guinn, won't you write Tina a note? She has won straight A's in all her work."
"Good. Give her my love."
She spoke with firmness. "Guinn, I want you to write to Tina. She'll feel hurt never to hear from you."

Anger rose within her at such times, but she controlled it. She couldn't risk finding out too much about her mother's secret life.

"You went to see Lilith get her degree."

"You go and I'll stay at home and look after the youngsters," he told her.

She faced him, her brown eyes challenging his. "Guinn, I have often told you that you make a great difference in your treatment of the two girls. It isn't fair, Guinn, honestly—it's cruel! It has caused Tina many a heartache from her childhood. Some day it may estrange her from you."

Cold anger shook her, and a mist blurred her eyes, but she spoke quietly.

He stared at her in amazement, resentment.

She hurried on. "It's seldom that I ask you to do anything for my pleasure, but I can't bear it if you don't go with me to see our Tina get her degree."

She flung her hands out in a passionate gesture.

"All right," he said, as a flush spread over his face, and he made a gesture as if to stop her from further argument. "I think you are oversentimentalizing a situation, but I'll go, if that's the way you feel about it."

She kissed him quickly, and left the room.

She had wrung this justice from him for her Tina, but who would win recognition from him for her, as against the dead rival? She knew one black moment of jealousy and rage and despair. She struggled the half wish she had never married this man, never seen him! Will Lundy would never have treated her and her children like this. Will Lundy loved Tina right now better than her own father did. Then she shook her body vehemently, as to shake off a blasphemy. She must have faith, have patience, and God would make things right in time. But, if only God weren't so—leisurely!

When Irene and Guinn went to see Tina get her degree from Baylor University in June, Will Lundy went with them.

"Tina's my girl," he boasted. "The sweetest thing that ever lived."

She did look sweet, as she stood under an old oak tree on the campus to receive congratulations after the commencement exercises were over, her cap set jauntily on her boyish, bobbed hair, her brown eyes shining, her black scholar's gown giving an incongruous look to her feminine slightness and youth.

"I'm all educated," she cried to her father, waving her diploma at him. "Now I shan't need to learn another thing as long as I live."

"Well, she's got a good mind. She learns fast," put in Will Lundy stoutly.

He gave Tina a diamond and platinum wrist watch for her graduation present, just such a gift as Guinn had bought for Lilith when she got her degree the year before.

Irene's eyes misted as Tina threw her arms about the doctor's neck and kissed him impulsively. She might have been his daughter. Perhaps she should have been his daughter.

"Your father and I have had your room done over for our present, darling," she told her.

But she had done that all herself with her wedding fees, and she had reminded Guinn more than once to buy Tina a present himself. She hadn't wanted to pick one out and to pay for it and chat herself and Tina with thinking that he had remembered, when he hadn't.

Nobody had had to remind him to buy a platinum and diamond wrist watch for Lilith, because Lilith had once merely hinted to him that that was what she wanted most. Would Tina notice the difference?

He said, she said nothing about it—but then Tina had her own pride and independence that fought off sympathy when she was really hurt. Children were so secretive! When they were little, they showed you their bumped heads and scratched knees, and a kiss from Mother healed the hurt; but when they were older they hid their heartaches from you, and Mother's kiss couldn't cure.

C. W. Mahlum, being by me first duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the County Auditor of the County of Crow Wing; that he has examined the foregoing list and knows the contents thereof; and that the same is a correct list of taxes delinquent for the year therein appearing upon real estate in said county.

C. W. MAHLUM, County Auditor.
Subscribed and sworn to before me this 31st day of January, 1929.
(Seal) W. A. M. JOHNSTON, Clerk of District Court, Crow Wing County, Minnesota.

Same Man, but Bigger

Herbert Hoover is essentially the man he was eight years ago. But like a tree, he has grown, the roots strike deeper, the trunk is taller and the branches have a wider spread. He is the same man with much more experience.—George Horace Lorimer.

Garden Located With Care Best

Select Soil Well Supplied With Plant Food to Get Good Returns.

In selecting the site for the vegetable garden this spring, care should be taken in locating the garden on soil that is well supplied with plant food, advises A. M. Binkley, associate professor of horticulture at the Colorado Agricultural college.

Soil is important. Good soil is essential to a successful garden, he says. It is often possible to select a site a little distance from the house that will yield better results, with less labor, than one closer to the house with unfavorable soil. As a rule, though, it is desirable to have the garden fairly close to the house.

A sandy soil, on land that slopes gently to the south is desirable, for generally it will "warm up" early and enable the gardener to plant and harvest early crops.

Good drainage is very desirable. A good fence around the garden is often indispensable for protection of the crops from farm animals, including poultry.

No amount of cultural care will replace sunshine! This highly important truth should not be overlooked in selecting the location for the vegetable garden and in arranging the crops, declares Mr. Binkley.

Exposure to Sunshine. Careful consideration should be given to the number of hours of exposure to sunshine each day. As a rule, foliage crops such as lettuce and spinach do fairly well in partial shade, but should have not less than three hours of sunshine per day.

Plants which ripen fruit, such as tomatoes, require more sunshine, and should have a minimum of five hours of sunshine daily.

Oklahoma Farmer Lost

Money Keeping Poor Cows

The story of a Payne county farmer who has kept a farm account for the last year illustrates how blindly we work when we do not know the production of our dairy cows. This farmer made an inventory of his entire farm. The inventory showed that he had $226 worth of feed on hand. He had five milk cows which were fed practically all of the $226 worth of feed. From the five cows he sold $128 worth of products. He made nothing and paid the cows $98 for the privilege of milking them. Some allowance should be made, however, for the dairy products used in the home.—Lloyd Godley, county agent, Payne county, Okla.

Common Salt Poisoning Is Easily Preventable

Next to lead and paint poisoning, the most frequent type of mineral poisoning is caused by common salt. Ordinarily, salt poisoning occurs only when salt-hungry animals are suddenly given access to liberal quantities of dry salt, fish brines, or pickling solutions. They gorge themselves, develop extreme thirst accompanied by severe diarrhea, foaming at the mouth, and abdominal pains. Paralysis, particularly of the hind quarters, may result, followed by coma and death in from four to ten hours. As small a quantity as three pounds may prove fatal to a cow while a lesser amount may result in the death of a sheep or a hog.

Lasting Influence of Limestone on Yields

The question is often asked as to the lasting crop producing usefulness of limestone. How long will limestone continue to influence crop production?

The West Salem field in Illinois affords some data on the subject. A four-ton per acre application made in 1911, and without subsequent applications, was still giving a slight response in 1927. For the first nine years of this period this single application gave increasing returns; during the last seven years the returns have been diminishing.

Control Insects and Disorders

Annual Loss From Pests and Diseases Amounts to Immense Sum.

The annual loss of crops caused by insect pests and fungus diseases in New York state exceeds the amount appropriated each year to conduct the state's business, according to a bulletin on the control of insects and plant diseases, reprinted at the New York state college of agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y.

By careful spraying experiments conducted by growers themselves, it is shown that the average annual preventable loss to potato growers in this state from blights and insects is nearly fifty bushels to the acre. This represents a yearly loss of more than ten million dollars which might be prevented by spending less than ten dollars an acre for spraying.

Estimate of Losses. A careful estimate of losses from the loose smut of oats in New York shows that five per cent of the crop is destroyed annually by this fungus disease, a net loss of more than a million dollars in 1919 when the government survey was made. The losses from apple scab, codling moth, and San Jose scale, from peach yellows and fire blight, and from all the other common insect pests and destructive plant diseases, if they could be accurately calculated, would show a grand total of appalling magnitude.

This tremendous annual tax on the plant production of the state might be greatly reduced by the proper application of known methods of control. The method of control to be employed for a given insect pest of fungus disease must be determined by the nature and habits of the enemy and by the character of the crop attacked. Plants can seldom be cured of disease as are men and animals; they must be protected from the attack. If sucking insects are to be controlled, something must be applied that will kill when it hits them; if biting insects are to be combated, the fruit and foliage of the plants must be sprayed or dusted with a poison that when eaten will destroy the pest.

Prevent Diseases. Many fungus diseases are prevented by spraying the plants before the disease appears, with a mixture destructive to the fungus but harmless to the plant. The poisons that destroy fungi are seldom effective against insects, and hence we have fungicides and insecticides. Often these can be combined in one mixture for insect and fungus pests of certain crops as, for example, arsenate of lead and lime sulphur for controlling codling moth and apple scab.

Best Planting Distance for Many Fruit Plants

Many times fruit plants are planted too close and growth is unsatisfactory, states C. Woolsey, University of Arkansas college of agriculture extension service. The common distances recommended are as follows: Apples, 35 feet apart each way; peaches, 21 feet apart each way; cherries, 21 feet apart each way; plums, 21 feet apart each way; grapes, 8 feet apart in a row that is 15 feet from the last row of tree fruits; blackberries, 8 feet apart in rows 8 feet apart; raspberries, 3 feet apart in rows 8 feet apart; strawberries, 2 1/2 to 3 1/2 feet apart in rows 4 feet apart.

Frequency of Milking Cows Is Hard Problem

It is very difficult to establish a hard and fast rule as to when a cow should be milked out completely after calving and how often she should be milked. Like many other things in the care of an animal, a great deal depends upon the existing circumstances. Care is not merely a matter of frequency of milking but also avoiding those conditions that would cause undue inflammation at this particular period. The understanding of the caretaker as to the condition of his animal is a very material factor.

Control Sheep Tick by Proper Dippings

Blood-Sucking Parasite Is Readily Eradicated.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Though widely prevalent, especially among close-herded range flocks, the blood-sucking parasite known as the sheep tick can be readily eradicated by flock owners who study its nature and habits and who will treat their sheep according to government directions. Farmers' Bulletin 798-E, "The Sheep Tick and Its Eradication by Dipping," just revised, describes and illustrates this enemy of the sheep industry.

"The only practical way of destroying the pest," declares Dr. Marion Imes, the author of the bulletin, "is by dipping the sheep. Two dippings are necessary about 21 days apart, as the first dipping may not destroy all the eggs and these may subsequently hatch a new brood." Several kinds of dips are used successfully, the selection being largely a matter of availability, economy, and convenience.

Many farm flocks of the United States as well as those kept under range conditions harbor sheep ticks and in some cases the parasites are present in sufficient numbers to cause considerable damage. The bulletin describes and illustrates the parasites in different stages of growth, gives full directions for dipping, and includes plans of wooden and concrete vats suitable for both small and large flocks.

Utilization of Straw for Insulation Board

The utilization of wheat straw for insulation board is now a practical process and this year one factory at St. Joseph, Mo., has purchased 30,000 tons of straw which is being manufactured into insulation board at the rate of 125,000 square feet daily, according to Prof. O. R. Sweeney, Iowa State college.

It has been found that wheat straw, after steel fingers in a shredder have separated it, produces long tough fibers which can be fabricated into a board that has great structural strength and will provide insulation in building that saves 25 to 40 per cent in fuel used for heating.

The practical application of insulation is recognized by engineers everywhere and farmers, too, are learning that insulation of poultry houses, hog houses and other buildings brings direct returns in saving of feed and fuel.

Small Oat Hullers Now Available for Farm Use

Small oat hullers with capacities of 45 to 50 bushels per hour are now available for farm use. They are usually owned by individual farmers but are sometimes used by a group of neighbors or occasionally mounted on a farm truck for custom work. Machines of this kind, which can be driven by a 5-horse-power electric motor, will also hull and scarify clover seed, crack corn, wheat or rye, hull speltz or skin and crack barley. These added uses of the huller help to keep it busy, cutting down its cost per hour of operation and lessening the expense of making a more valuable feed out of the oats crop.

Tillable Areas Favored for Increasing Pasture

Various methods of obtaining a stand of sweet clover on permanent pasture land have been tried during the past few years. These include very liberal liming—four tons of limestone per acre—plus disking before seeding, sowing on late snows or frost cracked soil, spading small areas to serve as centers of seed distribution, and various fertilizer treatments. Only a few stunted plants have resulted from any of these methods, and it is concluded that only tillable areas are suitable for the purpose of increasing pastureage with sweet clover.—From 1928 Report of the Director of the Storrs Experiment Station.

Winter Proper Time to Clip Horses and Mules

Horses and mules may be clipped almost any time in winter, provided the owner uses blankets after clipping and properly houses the clipped animal. If the foregoing conditions are not complied with, better wait until the weather is warm and dry before clipping. Clipped horses and mules when exposed to cold winds or cold rain are very liable to contract pneumonia or pleurisy or both and quite often distemper, strangles or influenza. Early spring clipping followed by exposure to cold winds while being snipped in open stock cars brings out many cases of colds, shipping fever, influenza or pneumonia.

Raising Dairy Calf Is Quite Serious Problem

Those who know how to raise a human baby know exactly how to raise a dairy calf. By "exactly," I don't mean, of course, that the calf and the baby eat the same kind of stuff, says a writer in an exchange. But I do mean that the kind of care used in raising a baby is just the kind of care required to raise a calf. Babies require regular attention, so do calves. Babies require clean food. Exactly so with calves. Babies require the right kind of nourishment at the right time and in right amounts. And calves are not different.

Quality Is First in Home Gardens

Good Seed Is Prime Requisite for Best Crop of Vegetables.

Quality comes first, says Paul Work of the New York state college of agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y., speaking of varieties of vegetables for home use and for the home garden. Good seed is a prime requisite, and to be sure of satisfaction, it usually is best to deal with a seed house that caters to commercial growers.

Corn Is Mainstay.

Sweet corn is the mainstay of many home gardens and often is the main reason for their existence, for it pays the highest dividends. Sweet corn loses 50 per cent of its sugar and hence its flavor and tenderness in 24 hours after it is picked. This is a mighty good reason for having it close at hand. Among the best varieties are Early White Cob Corn, Golden Bantam, Early Sunshine, Golden Giant, Country Gentleman, Evergreen and Whipple's Yellow.

For the same reasons, peas come next to corn in importance. Thomas Laxton and Gradus are the best varieties for quality, Alaska is the earliest. The dwarf kinds such as American Wonder, Knos Excelsior, Little Marvel, and Laxtonian give more peas to the pod, and are more tender. Telephone, Stratagem and Alderman are late, big-bodied peas.

Among the beans, Stringless Green Pod which is round, early and tender and Bountiful are to be recommended. Most good beans have curved pods.

Lima Beans Desirable.

Lima beans are very desirable for the home garden, but their long growing season and the unfavorable effects of cold wet ground and bad weather make them difficult in New York state to raise. The better ones for central New York are the Burpee bush, the Fordhook bush, and the Henderson bush. Of the pole beans, Scotia, Kentucky, Wonder, Leviathan, Challenger and Green Shell are good.

Canary Grass Valuable for Protein Content

The following is taken from a write-up of the work being done at the Waseca substation in Minnesota. It appeared in the Milking Shorthorn Journal:

"Another interesting experiment is with fennel grass, or canary grass. This grows in sloughs and wet places, yielding 10 tons to the acre of grass that has as high protein content as alfalfa. It roots like quack grass, growing from the shoots as well as from seed. If the experiment shows that the grass has everything claimed for it by farmers in the county that have grown it, there seems a considerable future for canary grass. The prospect of a Minnesota farmer getting his wet land caught with grass yielding ten tons to the acre of grass as nourishing as alfalfa, is even worse than getting his good land seeded with alfalfa, this is always having to be cut when he has other farm work to do."

Ohio Farmers Walk Many Miles in Doing Chores

The Ohio farmers walk an average of 99 miles a month in doing their chores according to tests made by the rural economics department at Ohio State university. To make this test pedometers were worn by the farmers while doing chores. Of two farmers with exactly the same number of horses and cows and approximately the same number of pigs, one farmer walked 135 miles a month and the other farmer 49 miles. The difference was caused by the relative convenience of the farmstead and facilities for watering and feeding the stock. The water pail proved to be excellent equipment for inducing the farmers to walk great distances.

Around the Farm

Bad chimneys cause farm fires.

More and more farmers are using the multiple horse hitch.

Keeping the barn free from refuse and manure will help sanitation.

Hay averages lowest in price in September, October and November.

Garden tools are much more satisfactory if they never are permitted to rust.

Farmers whose buildings are behind good windbreaks seldom have to shovel snow.

An old alfalfa field makes the best place imaginable for a crop of corn. It is also good for potatoes.

Lift the hot bed sash and let in fresh air whenever weather permits. That's what makes stocky plants.

It's the last few pints of milk, bushels of grain, or other units of production, which are the most profitable.

Crows pull up your corn? Treat the seed and keep the crows away. You can buy a repellent from your seedsman for a small sum.

Garden Located With Care Best

Select Soil Well Supplied With Plant Food to Get Good Returns.

In selecting the site for the vegetable garden this spring, care should be taken in locating the garden on soil that is well supplied with plant food, advises A. M. Binkley, associate professor of horticulture at the Colorado Agricultural college.

Soil is important. Good soil is essential to a successful garden, he says. It is often possible to select a site a little distance from the house that will yield better results, with less labor, than one closer to the house with unfavorable soil. As a rule, though, it is desirable to have the garden fairly close to the house.

A sandy soil, on land that slopes gently to the south is desirable, for generally it will "warm up" early and enable the gardener to plant and harvest early crops.

Good drainage is very desirable. A good fence around the garden is often indispensable for protection of the crops from farm animals, including poultry.

No amount of cultural care will replace sunshine! This highly important truth should not be overlooked in selecting the location for the vegetable garden and in arranging the crops, declares Mr. Binkley.

Exposure to Sunshine. Careful consideration should be given to the number of hours of exposure to sunshine each day. As a rule, foliage crops such as lettuce and spinach do fairly well in partial shade, but should have not less than three hours of sunshine per day.

Plants which ripen fruit, such as tomatoes, require more sunshine, and should have a minimum of five hours of sunshine daily.

Oklahoma Farmer Lost

Money Keeping Poor Cows

The story of a Payne county farmer who has kept a farm account for the last year illustrates how blindly we work when we do not know the production of our dairy cows. This farmer made an inventory of his entire farm. The inventory showed that he had $226 worth of feed on hand. He had five milk cows which were fed practically all of the $226 worth of feed. From the five cows he sold $128 worth of products. He made nothing and paid the cows $98 for the privilege of milking them. Some allowance should be made, however, for the dairy products used in the home.—Lloyd Godley, county agent, Payne county, Okla.

Common Salt Poisoning

Is Easily Preventable

Next to lead and paint poisoning, the most frequent type of mineral poisoning is caused by common salt. Ordinarily, salt poisoning occurs only when salt-hungry animals are suddenly given access to liberal quantities of dry salt, fish brines, or pickling solutions. They gorge themselves, develop extreme thirst accompanied by severe diarrhea, foaming at the mouth, and abdominal pains. Paralysis, particularly of the hind quarters, may result, followed by coma and death in from four to ten hours. As small a quantity as three pounds may prove fatal to a cow while a lesser amount may result in the death of a sheep or a hog.

Lasting Influence of Limestone on Yields

The question is often asked as to the lasting crop producing usefulness of limestone. How long will limestone continue to influence crop production?

The West Salem field in Illinois affords some data on the subject. A four-ton per acre application made in 1911, and without subsequent applications, was still giving a slight response in 1927. For the first nine years of this period this single application gave increasing returns; during the last seven years the returns have been diminishing.

Control Insects and Disorders

Annual Loss From Pests and Diseases Amounts to Immense Sum.

The annual loss of crops caused by insect pests and fungus diseases in New York state exceeds the amount appropriated each year to conduct the state's business, according to a bulletin on the control of insects and plant diseases, reprinted at the New York state college of agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y.

By careful spraying experiments conducted by growers themselves, it is shown that the average annual preventable loss to potato growers in this state from blights and insects is nearly fifty bushels to the acre. This represents a yearly loss of more than ten million dollars which might be prevented by spending less than ten dollars an acre for spraying.

Estimate of Losses.

A careful estimate of losses from the loose smut of oats in New York shows that five per cent of the crop is destroyed annually by this fungus disease, a net loss of more than a million dollars in 1919 when the government survey was made. The losses from apple scab, codling moth, and San Jose scale, from peach yellows and fire blight, and from all the other common insect pests and destructive plant diseases, if they could be accurately calculated, would show a grand total of appalling magnitude. This tremendous annual tax on the plant production of the state might be greatly reduced by the proper application of known methods of control.

The method of control to be employed for a given insect pest of fungus disease must be determined by the nature and habits of the enemy and by the character of the crop attacked. Plants can seldom be cured of disease as are men and animals; they must be protected from the attack. If sucking insects are to be controlled, something must be applied that will kill when it hits them; if biting insects are to be combated, the fruit and foliage of the plants must be sprayed or dusted with a poison that when eaten will destroy the pest.

Prevent Diseases. Many fungus diseases are prevented by spraying the plants before the disease appears, with a mixture destructive to the fungus but harmless to the plant. The poisons that destroy fungi are seldom effective against insects, and hence we have fungicides and insecticides. Often these can be combined in one mixture for insect and fungus pests of certain crops as, for example, arsenate of lead and lime sulphur for controlling codling moth and apple scab.

Best Planting Distance

for Many Fruit Plants

Many times fruit plants are planted too close and growth is unsatisfactory, states C. Woolsey, University of Arkansas college of agriculture extension service. The common distances recommended are as follows: Apples, 35 feet apart each way; peaches, 21 feet apart each way; cherries, 21 feet apart each way; plums, 21 feet apart each way; grapes, 8 feet apart in a row that is 15 feet from the last row of tree fruits; blackberries, 8 feet apart in rows 8 feet apart; raspberries, 3 feet apart in rows 3 feet apart; strawberries, 2 $\frac{1}{2}$  to 3 $\frac{1}{2}$  feet apart in rows 4 feet apart.

Frequency of Milking

Cows Is Hard Problem

It is very difficult to establish a hard and fast rule as to when a cow should be milked out completely after calving and how often she should be milked. Like many other things in the care of an animal, a great deal depends upon the existing circumstances. Care is not merely a matter of frequency of milking but also avoiding those conditions that would cause undue inflammation at this particular period. The understanding of the caretaker as to the condition of his animal is a very material factor.

Control Sheep Tick by Proper Dippings

Blood-Sucking Parasite Is Readily Eradicated.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Though widely prevalent, especially among close-herded range flocks, the blood-sucking parasite known as the sheep tick can be readily eradicated by flock owners who study its nature and habits and who will treat their sheep according to government directions. Farmers' Bulletin 798-E, "The Sheep Tick and Its Eradication by Dipping," just revised, describes and illustrates this enemy of the sheep industry.

"The only practical way of destroying the pest," declares Dr. Marion Imes, the author of the bulletin, "is by dipping the sheep. Two dippings are necessary about 21 days apart, as the first dipping may not destroy all the eggs and these may subsequently hatch a new brood." Several kinds of dips are used successfully, the selection being largely a matter of availability, economy, and convenience.

Many farm flocks of the United States as well as those kept under range conditions harbor sheep ticks and in some cases the parasites are present in sufficient numbers to cause considerable damage. The bulletin describes and illustrates the parasites in different stages of growth, gives full directions for dipping, and includes plans of wooden and concrete vats suitable for both small and large flocks.

Utilization of Straw for Insulation Board

The utilization of wheat straw for insulation board is now a practical process and this year one factory at St. Joseph, Mo., has purchased 30,000 tons of straw which is being manufactured into insulation board at the rate of 125,000 square feet daily, according to Prof. O. R. Sweeney, Iowa State college.

It has been found that wheat straw, after steel fingers in a shredder have separated it, produces long tough fibers which can be fabricated into a board that has great structural strength and will provide insulation in building that saves 25 to 40 per cent in fuel used for heating.

The practical application of insulation is recognized by engineers everywhere and farmers, too, are learning that insulation of poultry houses, hog houses and other buildings brings direct returns in saving of feed and fuel.

Small Oat Hullers Now Available for Farm Use

Small oat hullers with capacities of 45 to 50 bushels per hour are now available for farm use. They are usually owned by individual farmers but are sometimes used by a group of neighbors or occasionally mounted on a farm truck for custom work. Machines of this kind, which can be driven by a 5-horse-power electric motor, will also hull and scarify clover seed, crack corn, wheat or rye, hull speltz or skin and crack barley. These added uses of the huller help to keep it busy, cutting down its cost per hour of operation and lessening the expense of making a more valuable feed out of the oats crop.

Tillable Areas Favored for Increasing Pasture

Various methods of obtaining a stand of sweet clover on permanent pasture land have been tried during the past few years. These include very liberal liming—four tons of limestone per acre—plus disking before seeding, sowing on late snows or frost cracked soil, spading small areas to serve as centers of seed distribution, and various fertilizer treatments. Only a few stunted plants have resulted from any of these methods, and it is concluded that only tillable areas are suitable for the purpose of increasing pasture with sweet clover.—From 1928 Report of the Director of the Storrs Experiment Station.

Winter Proper Time to Clip Horses and Mules

Horses and mules may be clipped almost any time in winter, provided the owner uses blankets after clipping and properly houses the clipped animal. If the foregoing conditions are not complied with, better wait until the weather is warm and dry before clipping. Clipped horses and mules when exposed to cold winds or cold rain are very liable to contract pneumonia or pleurisy or both and quite often distemper, strangles or influenza. Early spring clipping followed by exposure to cold winds while being snipped in open stock cars brings out many cases of colds, shipping fever, influenza or pneumonia.

Raising Dairy Calf Is Quite Serious Problem

Those who know how to raise a human baby know exactly how to raise a dairy calf. By "exactly," I don't mean, of course, that the calf and the baby eat the same kind of stuff, says a writer in an exchange. But I do mean that the kind of care used in raising a baby is just the kind of care required to raise a calf. Babies require regular attention, so do calves. Babies require clean food. Exactly so with calves. Babies require the right kind of nourishment at the right time and in right amounts. And calves are not different.

Good Seed Is Prime Requirement for Best Crop of Vegetables.

Quality comes first, says Paul Work of the New York state college of agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y., speaking of varieties of vegetables for home use and for the home garden. Good seed is a prime requisite, and to be sure of satisfaction, it usually is best to deal with a seed house that caters to commercial growers.

Corn Is Mainstay

Sweet corn is the mainstay of many home gardens and often is the main reason for their existence, for it pays the highest dividends. Sweet corn loses 50 per cent of its sugar and hence its flavor and tenderness in 24 hours after it is picked. This is a mighty good reason for having it close at hand. Among the best varieties are Early White Cob Corn, Golden Bantam, Early Sunshine, Golden Giant, Country Gentleman, Evergreen and Whipple's Yellow.

For the same reasons, peas come next to corn in importance. Thomas Laxton and Gradus are the best varieties for quality. Alaska is the earliest. The dwarf kinds such as American Wonder, Knos Excelsior, Little Marvel, and Laxtonian give more peas to the pod, and are more tender. Telephone, Stratagem and Alderman are late, big-bodied peas.

Among the beans, Stringless Green Pod which is round, early and tender and Bountiful are to be recommended. Most good beans have curved pods.

Lima Beans Desirable

Lima beans are very desirable for the home garden, but their long growing season and the unfavorable effects of cold wet ground and bad weather make them difficult in New York state to raise. The better ones for central New York are the Burpee bush, the Fordhook bush, and the Henderson bush. Of the pole beans, Scotia, Kentucky, Wonder, Levathan, Challenger and Green Shell are good.

Canary Grass Valuable for Protein Content

The following is taken from a write-up of the work being done at the Waseca substation in Minnesota. It appeared in the Milking Shorthorn Journal:

"Another interesting experiment is with fella's grass, or canary grass. This grows in sloughs and wet places, yielding 10 tons to the acre of grass that has as high protein content as alfalfa. It roots like quack grass, growing from the shoots as well as from seed. If the experiment shows that the grass has everything claimed for it by farmers in the county that have grown it, there seems a considerable future for canary grass. The prospect of a Minnesota farmer getting his wet land caught with grass yielding ten tons to the acre of grass as nourishing as alfalfa, is even worse than getting his good land seeded with alfalfa, this is always having to be cut when he has other farm work to do."

Ohio Farmers Walk Many Miles in Doing Chores

The Ohio farmers walk an average of 99 miles a month in doing their chores according to tests made by the rural economics department at Ohio State university. To make this test pedometers were worn by the farmers while doing chores. Of two farmers with exactly the same number of horses and cows and approximately the same number of pigs, one farmer walked 135 miles a month and the other farmer 49 miles. The difference was caused by the relative convenience of the farmstead and facilities for watering and feeding the stock. The water pail proved to be excellent equipment for inducing the farmers to walk great distances.

Around the Farm

Bad chimneys cause farm fires.

More and more farmers are using the multiple horse hitch.

Keeping the barn free from refuse and manure will help sanitation.

Hay averages lowest in price in September, October and November.

Garden tools are much more satisfactory if they never are permitted to rust.

Farmers whose buildings are behind good windbreaks seldom have to shovel snow.

An old alfalfa field makes the best place imaginable for a crop of corn. It is also good for potatoes.

Lift the hot bed sash and let in fresh air whenever weather permits. That's what makes stocky plants.

It's the last few pints of milk, bushels of grain, or other units of production, which are the most profitable.

Crows pull up your corn? Treat the seed and keep the crows away. You can buy a repellent from your seedsman for a small sum.
